Videographers Set New World Record in Wedding Video Coverage

Professional wedding videographers, who traveled from across the country and as far as Australia, used 105 video cameras to set a new World Record in live wedding ceremony coverage during the wedding of Alysia & Farai Melton at the World Record Wedding Video Event February 15, 2006 in Sacramento, CA. And by using today's ultra compact digital video technology and strategic placements, both video and audio was recorded without the majority of guests at Sacramento's Library Galleria knowing they were even there!

The event was organized by the Sacramento Professional Videographers Association (www.spva.info) and co-sponsored by the Wedding & Event Videographers Association International (www.weva.com), the largest trade association for professional videographers worldwide.

Jeremy Rasnic of j razz creations was one of over 65 professional wedding videographers from around the country (including 12 states and two continents) to participate in this history-making event.

In addition, Mr. Rasnic attended several professional development seminars in new digital video technology and wedding video creativity as part of the record-setting event.

The wedding couple, Alysia & Farai Melton, and their guests also watched a finished version of their wedding that was produced on-site using state-of-the-art digital video editing techniques and projected during their reception, that same day! Seeing the emotional moments preserved on video and revealed live on-screen brought tears of joy to their eyes.

The couple later remarked how unobtrusive the videographers were and how nothing captured the day, including all the sights and sounds as well as video. "The video captured more than a still photo ever could," remarked the groom.
